Microcredentialing 101: 2-Part Webinar Series

Once the live date has passed, these webinars will be available on demand.

Webinar 1: How Digital Microcredentialing Supports Retention & Promotes Persistence Wednesday, October 23 ~ 3:00-4:00pm (Eastern)

Higher education institutions across the country are implementing digital badges and credentials to guide, motivate, document, and validate formal and informal student learning. Today's credentials include digital badges and micro-credentials that open new doors for adult learners toward quick wins for career development and add value with visual recognition for accomplishments. Digital badging provides a digital transcript that highlights a learning narrative that makes competencies, accomplishments, and connections more visible.

In this session, you'll learn how digital badging supports learning and motivates students to progress through their courses, programs, and new educational models. Participants will receive an overview of national data on the extent to which micro-credentials are being used in higher education formal and informal learning programs. Participants will explore examples of micro-credentialing in practice will be shared from a variety of contexts spanning formal degree programs, continuing education, experiential learning, as well as others.

Webinar 2: A Practical Guide To Implementing Microcredentialing Wednesday, October 30 ~ 3:00-4:00pm (Eastern)

Higher education institutions across the country are implementing digital badges and credentials to guide, motivate, document, and validate formal and informal student learning. Today's credentials include digital badges and micro-credentials that open new doors for adult learners toward quick wins for career development and add value with visual recognition for accomplishments. Digital badging provides a digital transcript that highlights a learning narrative that makes competencies, accomplishments, and connections more visible.

In this session, participants will receive a behind-the-scenes tour of the features of micro-credentialing platforms, as well as data available about user behavior in the platforms. In this session, participants will examine and be able to utilize the highlights from recent micro-credential research on how to implement programs to optimize effectiveness. Participants will understand and be able to put to use the basics of a micro-credentialing implementation plan and conclude with lessons learned from over five years of implementation experience.

Speaker(s)

Both webinars in this series will be presented by:

Veronica Diaz has over 12 years of experience supporting faculty and teaching and learning programs in higher education as well as 10 years of experience supporting adult professional learning in associations. Currently, she serves as the Director of professional learning at EDUCAUSE and ensures that learning and development programs support and advance the overall strategic priorities of the professional learning and communities and research teams, and serves member needs with excellence in program design and development, program delivery, and program evaluation. Veronica advises senior leaders on methods for improving or enhancing member engagement and aligning services with member needs. She is responsible for contributing to the strategic management of the professional learning product portfolio serving over 2000 higher education institutions in the US and abroad, along with corporate, and not-for-profit associations, building and coordinating with partners to create new learning programs, and providing operational oversight for existing programs. Veronica also supports the association's online programs, which currently serve over 10,000 members annually. She supports face-to-face events and conference-based learning experiences and manages the EDUCAUSE micro-credentialing program and virtual and place-based mentoring programs.
